Forgotten Books, 2018. Hardback. Condition: New. Language: English . Brand New Book ***** Print on Demand *****. Excerpt from The Plant World, Vol. 2 Countless blossoms of the Odorous wild Roses fill the gulches and ravines; plants that are only a few inches high may be found sporting several flowers, while the hedge-forming bushes are covered with buds and blossoms, in all the possible shades of red, and its variegation with white. Here also are found Old friends in the blue Spiderwort, appearing in its true form like a veritable immense spider; the yellow four-o'clock; and Larkspurs, long sprays of the blue and white, like those of the Old-fashioned gardens, but much more beautiful. High on the banks are white clouds of scented petals from the wild Plum and Cherry, the Thimbleberry and the Raspberry. Climbing among these trees and shrubs are seen interlacing the Clematis and wild Hops in blossoming garlands of white and green, forming trellises, arbors and bowers innumerable, hanging strands and festoons from one side of the path to the other, swaying amid the breeze and keeping time to the cadence of the mountain streams. The Cacti have been in bloom for some time, and we must not pass them by; in fact it would be impossible, as they are everywhere and are apt to make themselves felt severely if not noticed. It is indeed fortunate if on our strolls we return without one or more of their sharp spines having penetrated our shoes and entered the flesh, there to prove themselves long sought for, hard to find and decidedly painful. The Cacti are at their best upon the prairie, especially after a dry, hot spring; it seems incredible how little moisture they require. A plant has been known...
